2. Programme description

The overall purpose of the programme is to provide students with breadth and depth in central areas of the subject matter of international marketing and brand management. Following this comprehensive goal, theoretical concepts, models and tools will be compared with real and complex problems in organizations in order to train the students in advanced problem solving.

The programme is organized into two tracks:
- Track 1: Strategies for Brands and International Markets
- Track 2: International Consumer Trends, Brands and Innovation

Track 1: Strategies for Brands and International Markets aims at introducing, explaining and applying central theories in business administration, especially with an international focus and an emphasis on marketing and branding. The track mainly discusses different areas from a management perspective. An ambition is to provide students with an academic perspective as well as an understanding of how challenges are approached from a practitioner point of view based upon theoretical models and constructs.

The track starts by introducing basic models and theories within the central areas of the international marketing and brand management. That is followed by a mandatory general course in research methods. In addition, the students can choose between a course with a focus on retailing and multichannel marketing, or a course that deepens their knowledge on marketing and the Internet. The third part of the track consists of a set of electives that may add different perspectives and models that provide an additional, in depth insight into the practical and theoretical areas that are related to the broad field of international marketing and brand management. The students may choose different specializations depending on their interests and career plans – all dependant on courses available. At the beginning of the second semester, it is also mandatory to elect one of two courses on research methodology (qualitative or quantitative). As a final part of the track, students will conduct their own research and demonstrate their ability to independently apply the different ideas and theories. introduced by the different courses. This will result in a degree project of ten weeks.

Track 2: International Consumer Trends, Brands and Innovation provides students with breadth and depth in central areas of the subject matters of global consumer culture evolution, brands and innovation. To reach this overall objective, the theoretical concepts, models and tools will be related to real and complex problems in organizations in order to train the students in applying advanced theory to real-life business challenges in branding and innovation.

This track starts by introducing theories within the subject matter of the evolution of consumer culture and brands, followed by a course on models and tools for innovation. These two track-unique courses are followed by a mandatory course on research methodology and elective courses that add in-depth models and insights of the practical and theoretical areas that are related to the broad field of international marketing. At the beginning of the second semester, it is also mandatory to elect one of two courses on research methodology (qualitative or quantitative). As a final part of the track students will, in a degree project of ten weeks, conduct their own research and demonstrate their ability to independently apply the different ideas and theories introduced by the different courses in the form of a master’s thesis.

Career opportunities
Graduates from this programme can seek positions in international firms within marketing, strategy, brand and product management, sales and marketing research. Knowledge in these areas of specialisation is of constant demand, and while other programme may focus on either international marketing or brand management what is exclusive for this particular programme is the combination of both these branches of learning.

Connection to further studies
Successful completion of the programme will enable students to apply to doctoral programmes in business administration.

3. Learning outcomes

In accordance with the Higher Education Ordinance, the Degree of Master (60 credits) is awarded to students who at the completion of the programme accomplish the following:

Knowledge and understanding
- demonstrate knowledge and understanding within international marketing and brand management, including both a broad command of the field and deeper knowledge of certain parts of the field, together with insight into current research and development work; and
- demonstrate deeper methodological knowledge in the field of international marketing and brand management.
- demonstrate an ability to identify relevant research topics within the broad area of international marketing and brand management and to independently design and carry out a study that investigates the issue in a relevant way.

Skills and abilities
- demonstrate an ability to integrate knowledge and to analyse, assess and deal with complex phenomena, issues and situations, even when limited information is available;
- demonstrate an ability to independently identify and formulate issues and to plan and, using appropriate methods, carry out advanced tasks within specified time limits;
- demonstrate an ability to clearly present and discuss their conclusions and the knowledge and arguments behind them, in dialogue with different groups, orally and in writing; and
- demonstrate the skill required to participate in research and development work or to work in other advanced contexts.
- demonstrate an ability to work individually as well as in groups with students from different cultures in order to solve practical problems as well as to manage a more extensive project.
- demonstrate an understanding of how cultural differences influence international marketing and brand management with respect to the implementation of marketing strategies and the management of the firm.
- demonstrate an understanding of the future challenges and main issues related to international marketing and brand management that are especially central for practitioners as well as in research.

Judgement and approach
- demonstrate an ability to make assessments within international marketing and brand management, taking into account relevant scientific, social and ethical aspects, and demonstrate an awareness of ethical aspects of research and development work;
- demonstrate insight into the potential and limitations of science, its role in society and people’s responsibility for how it is used; and
- demonstrate and ability to identify their need of further knowledge and to take responsibility for developing their knowledge.
- demonstrate an understanding of the different perspectives that the theories and constructs that are introduced during the various courses represent and how they can be combined when addressing practical and theoretical problems within the area of international marketing and brand management.

Independent project (degree project)
For a Degree of Master (60 credits) students must have completed an independent project (degree project) worth at least 15 higher education credits in international marketing and brand management, within the framework of the course requirements.

4. Course information

The initial ten weeks of the programme are organised into two tracks, and students are to specify which track they are applying for when submitting their applications for the programme. In accordance with the information above, students have a choice between a more management oriented perspective and a perspective that has an emphasis on consumer and cultural aspects; track 1 or track 2.

The programme of study is divided into two semesters, which are further divided into four study periods. Period 1 extends from late August to late October, period 2 from late October to mid-January, period 3 from mid-January to late March, and Period 4 from late March to early June.

Courses included
The course consists of four parts (in total 60 ECTS credits):
Part I: International Marketing and Strategy (7,5 credits) and Strategic Brand Management (7,5 credits) or Consumer Culture Theory and Consumer Insights (10 credits) and From Consumer Insight to Innovation (5 credits)
Part II: Research strategy course (7,5 credits) and one of the following: On-line Marketing, Brands and Consumers; Retailing, Multichannel marketing and Internationalisation (7,5 credits)
Part III: One of the following: Qualitative Research Methods (5 credits), Quantitative Research Methods (5 credits), plus two of the following: Market Intelligence (5 credits), Sustainability and Marketing Ethics (5 credits), Understanding consumption (5 credits), and Corporate Brand Management and Reputation (5 credits)

Part IV: Degree Project in Global Marketing (15 credits)

Each part is presented further below.

Part I:
The comprehensive goal of part I is to provide the students with a deeper understanding and knowledge of international marketing trends and theories.

The track Strategies for Brands and International Markets offers a focus on organizations and organizational decision-making on an international level. This also includes developing an understanding of different cultures in the world and their implications for marketing decisions. This first part of the programme also focuses on brands and their meaning on a corporate as well as on a more product oriented management level and in relation to consumers. This includes the different steps in developing competitive brands as well as how to manage corporate reputation and the internal values that guides a firm.

The track International Consumer Trends, Brands and Innovation provides students with breadth and depth in central areas of the subject matters of global consumer culture evolution, brands and innovation. This track starts by introducing theories within the subject matter of the evolution of consumer culture and brands, followed by a course on models and tools for innovation. The theoretical concepts, models and tools will be related to real and complex problems in organizations in order to train the students in applying advanced theory to real-life business challenges in branding and innovation.

Part II:
A goal of part II is to introduce students to the basic steps and considerations involved in academic research and the different roles that marketing and management research have in society. The course here will have a strong emphasis on problematization and the role of theory in academic research. In addition, the students can choose between a course that deepens their knowledge in retail, multichannel marketing and internationalisation, and a course that focuses more specifically on marketing on the internet and social media. The former will enable students to take part of the vast research pool that the School displays in retail management issues. This course provides students with opportunities to gain unique knowledge in this dynamic field. The latter focuses on the role of social media and the internet in relation to global marketing and branding and for consumers. The two courses aims at giving students the choice to develop their knowledge further in the area that corresponds best with their personal interests and career ambitions.

Part III:
During this period students will have an opportunity to get training in how to work with different research methods when conducting academic studies. They have a choice between a specialisation in either quantitative or qualitative research methods that can be applied in investigating marketing related issues. Students will also have the opportunity to start planning their master thesis. In addition, a set of electives offers additional current and theoretically relevant aspects that can be applied in international marketing. A basic idea here is that students should be able to find courses that they find especially relevant and interesting, and that will provide them with a broad basis for their future career. They will thus get tailor made master degree within the area of international marketing and brand management. They will be offered a course on consumption that introduces different perspectives and theories within this area. The students are also given the opportunity to have a course that increases the understanding of the theory and practice of corporate brand management and reputation in building, sustaining and protecting competitive advantages. Alternatively, students may elect the module on sustainability and marketing ethics which is designed to increase awareness and provide tools for analysing marketing aspects of issues such as corporate social responsibility (CSR), sustainable consumption, consumer pro-environmental attitudes and behaviours, and, ethics of social marketing. The module pays special attention to the manner in which organizations work with sustainability issues, what challenges they face and how they can be addressed. Yet, another elective module introduces the student with market intelligence and how to gather and evaluate different types of information.

Part IV:
The final part of the programme focuses entirely on the degree project. The students are to formulate a clear and researchable research/thesis question at the beginning of this final period. The topic will be selected from a list of broad themes specified by the available supervisors. At the start of the period, a supervisor will be assigned to each degree project.

5. Degree
Upon completion of the programme a degree of Master of Science in Business and Economics (60 credits) will be awarded in compliance with the National Higher Education Ordinance (SFS 2006:1053). Major will be Business Administration with a specialization in international marketing and brand management (Ekonomie magisterexamen, huvudområde företagsekonomi, för djupning i internationell marknadsföring och varumärken).

6. Admission requirements and selection criteria
An undergraduate degree (BA/BSc) with at least 60 ECTS credits in business administration or the equivalent. English 6.

Selection criteria
Selection will be based on academic merits from university studies and a Statement of Purpose in which applicants should state their reasons for applying to the programme.
